

Why ACASA?

ACASA is designed to put benefit back into the community, with education programs, training and scholarships to increase skills, knowledge and quality back into Australian businesses.

ACASA Standards are set to be real, practical and achievable, and do not rely on the ticking of forms to demonstrate safe work practice, but moreover push towards real substance. ACASA stands for substance over form.

The substance continues into education

ACASA has a growing suite of education programs that are designed to increase skills and knowledge in all areas of risk and management.

So why is ACASA different?

Training program curriculum is available to all trainers, regardless of whether they are an RTO or a qualified trainer assessor.

Anyone can deliver a program. However, only ACASA can assess and certify! This means that those that have the knowledge and skills can pass it on.

ACASA has a central database of students who have passed a course and it will list who delivered the training.

This means that those trainers who perform well will attract further students, and those that don't will be subject to normal market forces. As such, ACASA standards are high and consistent nationally.
